

Abstract

- 5 Photopolymerizable cylindrical, continuously seamless flexographic printing elements are produced by applying a layer of a photopolymerizable material to the outer surface of a hollow cylinder and joining the edges by calendering. Flexographic printing elements produced in this manner are used for the production of flexographic printing plates.